

An Open Letter On COVID-19 From Brainier

Learning leaders around the globe are facing a new challenge from the novel coronavirus. At Brainier, we are hearing from many of our clients that a temporary shift to a remote workforce is underway. Brainier remains committed to helping clients achieve their learning goals.

Despite the changes sure to come in the ensuing weeks while the world reacts to this outbreak, it is important to know that there will be no interruption of services from Brainier. Fortunately, eLearning through The Brainier LMS and its method of delivering learning content is inherently insulated from crises such as this. The ability to conduct virtual instructor-led training through video conferencing reduces the necessity for in-person training events. Offering learning content from anywhere, at any time, and on any device remains a powerful method for advancing your learning goals.

The infrastructure of The Brainier LMS, as well as the high-level of support will also remain unaffected. Our support staff is prepared to handle any issues that may present themselves while much of the working world plugs in from home.

Above all, we urge everyone to follow the guidelines from the CDC on prevention so that we may all return to normal soon, and with as few people troubled by this illness as possible.
